

An approach to local influence with massive data

Alonso Ogueda

Departamento de Matemática, Universidad Técnica Federico Santa María

Felipe Osorio

Departamento de Matemática, Universidad Técnica Federico Santa María

Abstract

The aim of this work is to present methods for carrying out local influence for massive data. This problem will be exemplified in a growth curve model (GMANOVA) with data from the SIMCE in Mathematics and Language. To find the most influential directions, stochastic methods are used to calculate the singular value decomposition associated with the normal curvature.